2019 INAUGURAL CONFERENCE

Healing Complex Patients in a Toxic World

Our increasingly toxic world has caused a dramatic rise in the number of people suffering from complex multi-system illnesses and yet these patients fall through the cracks of conventional medicine. Come and learn from leading experts how to use a systems-based approach to diagnose and treat these environmentally acquired illnesses.

Together we can make a difference.

EXPERT SPEAKERS
Dr. Robert Naviaux, Dr. Joseph Brewer, Dr. Joseph Burrascano, Dr. Richard Horowitz, Dr. Michael Gray, Dr. Sonia Rapaport, Dr. Mary Ackerley, Dr. Neil Nathan, and Annie Hopper, among others.

ISEAI is a collaborative community of clinicians, researchers and environmental professionals whose mission is to restore health to individuals with environmentally acquired illnesses (EAI) through clinical practice, education, and research. We provide certification through a cutting edge, systems-based framework to more effectively treat these complex multisystem illnesses. We embrace unbiased, evidenced-based medicine in our goal to provide a unified voice to advance awareness and acceptance of EAI in the broader medical and patient communities.

I have learned more in 10 months of being a member of ISEAI about environmental illness than I have in the previous five years. I am grateful for the discussions and interaction with members.
